IG Defined

The typical staff officer is a man past middle life, spare, wrinkled, intelligent, cold, noncommittal, with eyes like a codfish, polite in contact, but at the same time unresponsive, cool, calm and as damnably composed as a concrete pot or plaster of Paris cast; a human petrifaction with a heart of feldspar and without charm or friendly germ; minus bowels, passions or a sense of humor. Happily they never reproduce and all of them finally go to hell.

- GEN George S. Patton, Jr.

Preamble of AR 20-1

IGs are responsible for advising commanders on the state of their commands. IGs are confidential advisors and factfinders to the commander. Selfless service is the cardinal attribute of successful military and civilian IGs. Everyone within a command or headquarters will respect IGs for their level of expertise, candor, credibility, reliability, and trustworthiness. IGs must adhere to and be advocates of the Army values and the Warrior Ethos. IGs will be among the Army's most professional and knowledgeable soldiers and civilians for their particular grade or rank. Uniformed Army IGs are selected through a nominative process, and civilian IGs of all types are selected through normal civilian personnel recruitment procedures and approved by the detailed IG (see chap 2).

Command and State Inspectors General

Inspectors General (IGs) are assigned to commands, agencies, activities, centers, communities, installations, and States in accordance with established authorization documents. In general, IGs serve on the personal staffs of general officers who command organizations with wartime missions. IGs and their IG offices normally begin at division level and appear at the corps/ Army, Regional Readiness Command (RRC), State, and MACOM levels, to include separate brigades commanded by either general officers or full colonels. ARNG brigade combat teams also have detailed IGs. Commanders determine the need for IG supporting staff in accordance with AR 71–32 and other applicable regulations (see AR 20-1, para 2–1). The command or State IG is a member of the commander's personal staff.
